

MENTORING THE NEXT GENERATION OF WOMEN ECONOMISTS

If you are a young woman:

- studying year 11 or 12, or
- at university, but not yet started your final year of undergraduate study, and
- have a genuine interest in a career in economics

Apply now for the Department of Treasury and Finance's Mentoring Women program.

Connect one-on-one with a female economist:

- either in person, via video or phone – so you can participate wherever you live or study
- mentoring sessions tailored to your goals and needs
- receive advice and guidance on education and career options
- gain valuable insights into the diversity of pathways to economics

'As an aspiring economist, I enjoy being able to have a one-on-one chat with my mentor... participating in the program has given me an insight into the life of an economist.'

SHANZA KHAN, 2018 MENTORING WOMEN STUDENT MENTEE

ABOUT THE DEPARTMENT OF TREASURY AND FINANCE

DTF works at the heart of the Victorian government on key state economic issues and challenges, including:

- the State Budget
- research and public policy development to address social and economic disadvantage, climate change, energy and resources
- revenue forecasting
- the application of experimental economics, behavioural economics and market design principles to economic policy problems

'The best part of the program was being able to identify with a role model. The personal relationship I've formed with my mentor, who I now call a friend, has been highly valuable, and I know I can always reach out to her in five, 10, or even 20 years from now!'
